Clients with existing tax issues often are highly – and understandably – concerned with the potential for criminal ramifications based on their prior failures. Knowledge of exposures can, depending on the specific facts, either allow practitioners to assuage clients' fears or advise them on the exposures which are relevant under their facts. In this seminar, our faculty will provide an introduction to criminal tax concepts, including specific tax crimes, the process of a federal case generally, and options when a client faces potential exposure."

Discussion Topics

- Differences between civil & criminal penalties
- Circumstance where civil failures rise to criminal
- Navigating the US Patent & Trademark Office
- Tax crimes
- Timeline of a federal case
- Sentencing guidelines
- Disclosure options when discovering tax crimes/voluntary disclosure applicability
